THE WORD

Life is about so much more than being happy. Happiness is more a by-product than a goal. It takes humility to be able to live that way, acknowledging that neither you nor I are the center of the universe. None of us is – not of the universe, not of this planet Earth, maybe not even of our own lives. Knowing that, and living it as well, is what humility is about. Humility is... understanding that something is not amiss in another person simply because he or she does not like you.
being willing to clean not only your own bathroom, but someone else’s bathroom as well.
respecting the opinion of a teenager when you yourself are over 60; or being a teenager who appreciates the wisdom of someone who is much older.
realizing that someone of the opposite political persuasion may be more intelligent, or compassionate, or insightful, or even more holy---and being at peace with that fact.
 All of that and much more is the hidden underside of the virtue of humility, for no one of us is the axis on which the world spins.
 In the end, such an attitude of humility toward life and its patrons affects our comings and goings, the paths that we walk and the tables at which we sit. In fact, it has already begun. It happens at the Lord’s table, where all are welcome.
