THE WORD

Widows were not merry in the Bible. They were not high on Israel's scale of social importance, nor on that of other countries in biblical times. A widow was in trouble if she did not have a son or another male in the family to care for her. God's compassion for widows shines through here.

There is no faith in evidence on the part of either widow. Neither asks Elijah or Jesus to do anything. If anything, the widow of Zarephath blames the prophet for the death of her son: "Why have you done this to me, O man of God?" This could be the grief speaking or an assumption that a foreign prophet's presence attracted divine attention in some punishing way. But the prophet's prayer has God restore the child's life.

Compassion for the widow moves Jesus: "When the Lord saw her, he was moved with pity for her and said to her, 'Do not weep.'" Jesus does nothing more than speak to the young man, "Young man, I tell you, arise!" And the dead man sits up, speaking-- a nice touch by Luke. The young man returns to life speaking. What were his first words?

One wonders what God makes of our age, when the precarious condition of widows in the past has become the ongoing plight of so many women, young and old, across all cultures in the world. How many see their children die before them, the cost of diseases that could be averted, even cured, or needless wars between genocidal factions?

--How would you describe the condition of women in today's world?

--Where and how is Jesus calling us to act today to relieve the plight of women?
