THE WORD

Recent scholarship concerning the origins of Christianity indicates that from the earliest days of the Christian community its members were making bold claims concerning the identity of Jesus, claiming for him a role in salvation that could only be true of God. An earlier generation of scholars had tended to think that the identification of Jesus with God was something that developed only gradually within Christianity, but this seems not to be the case. From the outset, Christians apparently sought to affirm the divine status of Jesus.

This raises the question of what possibly could have led the first generation of Christians, almost all of whom were Jewish, to identify Jesus of Nazareth with God who made a covenant with Abraham and his descendants, who freed the Israelites from captivity in Egypt, and who promised through the prophets to bless all the families of nations. The answer in the New Testament is unambiguous. It was the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. This was a sign that Jesus has done what only God could do – break the power of sin and death. It is from this event that all of our beliefs about Jesus flow: that he is “God from God, light from light.... begotten not made, consubstantial with the Father.” All of these phrases are different ways of affirming that the Resurrection has revealed Jesus as the Lord of life and death.

The Resurrection tells us something about Jesus, but it is also tells us something about the God whom we encounter in the person of Jesus. The God we know in Jesus Christ is a God who is love, a love that is more powerful than our sin, a love that can triumph over death, a love that seeks to share itself with us so that we too can triumph over sin and death. This is the message of Easter that we are called to share.
