The choir will practice and sing the Feast of Holy Cross and will begin again in the Fall to prepare for Christmas. Finally, if we are able to get some new cantors we might be able to have a cantor at the 9:00 a.m. Mass on Sunday.

THE WORD

Many people have been impressed and attracted by the humility of Pope Francis. He lives in two rooms of a hotel, paid his own housing bill the day after his election, made a sandwich to feed his Swiss Guard, invites the poor to eat with him, washes prisoners' feet, installs bathrooms and showers for the homeless people, and brings them in to tour the Sistine Chapel. He also calls the Mafia, the Curia, and all of us to accountability. His humility is humbling and challenging. He walks his talk and the talk of Jesus. Everyone who humbles self will be exalted.

Being humble is simply being truthful about one's gifts and one's limitations. Walking on the foot of our gifts, we thank those who affirm them and God for giving them to us along with the ability to develop them. Walking on the foot of our limitations we admit them, say "I'm sorry" when appropriate, and seek to learn from them how we might make amends. To approach Mount Zion and the city of the living God entails walking on both feet: gratitude for our gifts and honesty about our limitations and our sins.

In a world that seeks gain, notoriety, and limelight, the humility of Pope Francis is both attractive and counter-cultural. The humility of Jesus comforts and challenges us. God makes a home where we walk on both feet, the wealth of our gifts and the poverty of our weakness. God showers us with love and mercy knowing our grace and our sin. Be humble. Accept your gifts. Name your weakness. Follow the example of Pope Francis and live the way of Jesus, who humbled himself by taking on every human limitation with the exception of sin, even death.

– Do I walk on both feet of my gifts and weaknesses or limp on one?

– What keeps me from accepting others in humility as God accepts me and all earth's children?
